Bibliography of Syracuse

The next best thing to knowing about an historic event is knowing where the knowledge sought can be found. That is why bibliography is becoming a more important science every day. The busy man of the future is going to demand bibliographies of the history of a section just as some men will not purchase technical and historical works unless they have been indexed. That is why this humble effort is made to gather a bibliography of Syracuse history. It is a start in the hope that it will be continued by somebody actuated by the same endeavor to save time for humanity.

Since Dec. 28, 1800, when the first white child was born in a log hut on the site of what now constitutes the heart of Syracuse, many historic things have happened in this place, as well as a lot of things more interesting than historic. Enough has happened so that at one time or another more than a thousand people have seen fit to write about it. Several essayed complete histories of Syracuse; many more but copied the histories of those who had written before, but by far the larger number only recorded incidents that they knew about. This is the most valuable history of all, for it was their endeavor to record only those incidents of which they had actual knowledge. Unfortunately much of this history is buried in newspaper files; pamphlets which are easily lost or records that have not been preserved. It is in the endeavor to save much of this fugitive history from oblivion that this very incomplete index, or bibliography, is made. But this is only a start, although it has taken close upon forty years to gather the records for this start, and it is expandable. It is up to somebody to add to it and keep on with it.

When the time comes to make a bibliography of Onondaga county history a much greater task will be found, for the territory from which Onondaga county was taken is rich in materials and there are many thousands of volumes which touch upon the subject.

The earlier Encyclopedia Brittannica, which devoted five and six pages to ancient Syracuse, only gave a few lines to modern Syracuse and found but two items worthy of attention in Syracuse history—the production of salt and the Jerry Rescue. Later encyclopedias dropped the Jerry Rescue. To show the need for correction it might be said that the great Britannica placed the tribal fortress of the Onondagas which Champlain attacked in 1615 on the shores of Onondaga Lake, when it was really on the shores of Nichols' Pond in Madison county; had the first house built on the site of Syracuse in 1805, when that was the first tavern which was then built, and had the name of Syracuse given in 1824, when it was in fact given in 1820. But the idea of this bibliography is not to correct history, rather to tell where the history is and leave the correction to others.

Both the Syracuse Library and the Onondaga Historical Association are rich in volumes, pamphlets, scrap books and clippings that refer to Syracuse history. These are generally classified so that they are readily accessible. There are many files of newspapers in these libraries as well as in the newspaper offices, but historical articles might as well be buried if one does not know the dates of publication. That many of these articles may be saved the dates of publication are given in this bibliography.

The classification of books, pamphlets and articles is not so particular as to be misleading. Under the heading of General History are listed those books, pamphlets and articles which are more or less comprehensive of the city's history, and in which anything or everything is liable to be found. When it comes to genealogies, biographies, church, school, institutional or civic government history, and chronicles of events within certain periods and classes, in which division is possible, the classification has been made.

The thing to remember is that Syracuse Public Library has many of the bound files which contain the newspaper articles to which reference has been made by figures—the first figure being the month, the second the date of the month, and the last the year. The files to be found in the Syracuse Public Library are as follows:

BIOGRAPHY AND GENEALOGY

Writers of biography have not neglected Syracuse—rather it may be said that they have been generous to a fault. A dozen large volumes already listed in the General History of Syracuse are largely devoted to biographies, and so they are not repeated in this chapter. Also, by consulting the finding list of genealogies at the Syracuse Public Library, the records will be found of many Syracuse families. The following list is made up of volumes, pamphlets, newspaper clippings, etc., all of which can be readily referred to:

Records of Deaths and Marriages in Syracuse and Onondaga County. Compiled by Mrs. Minnie (Ward) Kellogg, Syracuse, 1915-19. Taken from newspapers published in Syracuse and from the Madison Observer, 1846-75. Contents: 1846-50. From Syracuse Star and Syracuse Journal. 1850-60. From Syracuse Chronicle, Daily Standard and Madison Observer. 1860-69. From Daily Standard. 1870-1876. From Daily Standard, Daily Courier, Daily Journal.*

ONONDAGA IN COLONIAL HISTORY OF NEW YORK.

Only the most indefatigable searchers after early local history realize the great mass of important material to be found in the bulky volumes of the "Documents Relating to the Colonial History of New York," edited by Edmund Bailey O'Callaghan. These documents, procured in Holland, England and France by John R. Brodhead, were published by the State from 1855 to 1861. While the volumes themselves are readily accessible in the reference department of the Syracuse Library, the library of the Onondaga Historical Association, and several private libraries, those interested in local history will have a difficult task to search out that which is especially pertinent to the Onondaga country, its first visitors and the stories of life among the Indians, by reason of its being intermingled with documents relating to other parts of the State.

For the benefit of those interested in the study of Onondaga history prior to the formation of the present county lines, and to glimpse the importance of these volumes as original founts for the local historian, the following index of Onondaga matters in chronological form has been made:

1656—Father Dablon and Jacques at Onondaga, IX., 130; French build a fort at Onondaga, IX., 304, 783.

1665—Sieur Charles Le Moyne a prisoner among the Iroquois, IX., 37; Death of Father Le Moyne, III., 123; IX., 38; treaty of peace with Governor de Tracy of the French demanded by six Onondaga ambassadors, and the French invited to settle at Onondaga, III., 121.

1667—Father Etienne de Carheil at Onondaga, IX., 227.

1670—Rev. Father Raffeix on fishing and hunting at Onondaga, III., 251.

1671—Father Jean de Lamberville at Onondaga, IX., 171.

1673—Sieur de La Salle sent to Onondaga, IX., 97, 101, 103.

1677—Wentworth Greenhalgh's trip to Onondaga, III., 250. Duplicate of report in Doc. Hist., I., 15.

1679—Gov. Andros speaks of the Onondagas, III., 277.

1682—Onondagas march against the Hurons and others, IX., 197; Jean de Lamberville's letter to Count Frontenac from Onondaga, IX., 192, 798; Sieur de Lamarque at Onondaga, IX., 183.

1683—Sieur Le Moyne at Onondaga, IX., 203.

1684—Indian name of Jean de Lamberville, IV., 95; letters of Jean de Lamberville from Onondaga, III., 453, 454; IX., 226, 252, 254-260; Sieur Charles Le Moyne at Onondaga, IX., 258; Onondagas as mediators between the French and Senecas, IX., 236; Grand council at Onondaga, IX., 255; Onondagas forbidden to enter into a treaty with De la Barre, IX., 242; arms of the Duke of York set up among Onondagas, IX., 243.

1685—Strength of the Onondagas, IX., 282.

1686—French deserters stopped by the Indians, IX., 291; English ask the Onondagas to make war on the French, III., 461; one of the Fathers de Lamberville leaves Onondaga, III., 456; Gov. Dongan asks the Jesuits to leave, III., 489; Onondagas on a war expedition, III., 488; letters of Jacques de Lamberville from Onondaga, III., 488, 490.

1687—Jean de Lamberville at Onondaga, III., 465, 471, 488; IX., 297, 298, 308, 322, 324, 325, 333, 358, 362; fears for Father Lamberville at Onondaga, IX., 325; Onondagas attack Cataraqui, III., 480; eagle an emblem of the Onondagas, III., 481; Senecas fly to the Onondagas, IX., 366; Fathers de Lamberville only missionaries at Onondaga, III., 474; Jean de Lamberville said to have been eighteen years among Iroquois, IX., 320; Onondagas ask six cannon for their fort to use in the French war, III., 485.

1688—Onondagas declare themselves neutral, IX., 384; one hundred cabins at Onondaga, IX., 375; Miss d'Alonnes and two other prisoners taken to Onondaga, IX., 389; Onondaga captives in Canada, III., 532.

1689—Onondaga delegates in a battle, IX., 402; boast that four French prisoners were eaten at Onondaga, IX., 466; Canadian embassy to Onondaga, IX., 464, 465.

A LAST WORD.

The single asterisk (*) after an article means that the book, pamphlet or clipping is to be found in the Syracuse Public Library. The double asterisk () means that the book, pamphlet or article is to be found in the Onondaga Historical Association.

The blank spaces at the end of various chapters are left for convenience in adding the titles of additional books and articles which may be published in the future.

In the chapter upon Onondaga Indian Notes many of the books referred to are not to be found in Syracuse at all, for the author has found them in the Congressional Library at Washington, the New York Public Library, the State Library at Albany and in other libraries throughout the country, many of which are private. The endeavor was to make complete the ethnological and archeological bibliography so far as it related to the Indians of the Syracuse section.

Now, a last word in the search for Syracuse history. It is a good thing to remember that for many years it has been the habit of the newspapers of Syracuse—the habit reaching its peak in the 'seventies, 'eighties and 'nineties—to make chronological lists of happenings, such as accidents, celebrations, fires and important political events, and also death lists for the year, as well as municipal records, building records, banking, etc., and these were usually published upon the last day of the old year, or in an almanac which was issued as a carriers' greeting. In a way they make helpful indices in finding things not important enough to have been later specialized by reminiscence. These records may be found in the files at the Syracuse Public Library.
